05 How can you participate?
Faculty Success is critical to success of CSUF students

- In what ways is CSUF successful at supporting faculty?
- What is the level of faculty job satisfaction?
- How can we improve the working conditions at CSUF so that faculty will be successful?
Two Approaches

COACHE
Captures faculty sentiment with regard to teaching, service and research, tenure and promotion, departmental engagement and collegiality, and other aspects of the academic workplace.

Benchmark: The mean of several 5-pt Likert scale survey questions that share a common theme
Who are we compared to?

- CUNY - Lehman College (2019)
- Georgia State University (2020)
- Illinois State University (2022)
- San Jose State University (2019)
- University of Texas at El Paso (2020)
COACHE defines as an "area of strength" as any Benchmark where your institution scores first or second among your selected comparison group and in the top 30 percent of the cohort. Conversely, an "area of concern" is where your faculty rating of a Benchmark falls fifth or sixth among your peers and in the bottom 30 percent (the red section) of the cohort.

Procedure

• 4 focus groups during May 3 – June 3, 2022

• Semi-structured discussion guide
  • developed by the SSRC,
  • input by from Academic Senators, CFA Representatives

• Zoom meetings audio-recorded and transcribed

• Thematic analysis using a manual process
More satisfied when ...

- Having mentors in the department and university
- Engagement in campus activities through various roles
- Clear expectation ("knowing what to expect")
- Having autonomy over the course content
- Access to benefits, i.e. teaching more classes which led to receiving health insurance

The FDC is a source of valuable and tangible institutional support.
I have had a very supportive mentor and mentors in my ten years working as a part-time lecturer. Although I do wonder what the experience would be like if I had not had such involved mentors because I have recognized over time that there has been difficulty accessing information or even understanding information that would go out to all faculty that did not necessarily apply to lectures and not really knowing what to do in those cases... (1: 4-5)

I’m very fortunate that I’ve been here long enough that I pretty much, barring getting more classes, I at least get my three, and the greatest of all is getting my insurance. (3:3)

I am increasingly satisfied by the Faculty Development Center. While their programming is excellent, there have been several times when I’ve had an attempt to go and enroll, and because of my part-time status, it wouldn’t let me enroll. (3:11)
Challenges

• Lack of (equitable) resources for Part-Time Faculty
• Lack of connection with Departments
  • Department chair is one of the principal ways that P/T faculty experience their jobs
• Inadequate advance notice of course assignment
• Overall, participants want to teach more classes
• Compensation is inadequate
• A sense of disposable nature of their job
• Faculty do not feel they are being evaluated in a way that transforms educational experience for students
“I’ve been doing this for 12 years and I still feel disposable ... Part-time people are kind of treated like stepchildren. It’s like fill that class, do your job, don’t ask any questions, don’t bother us, we’re the important people over here, ... And then you might ask, well, why do you keep doing this for 12 years? It’s because of the connection with the students. That’s what keeps me going.” (1:5)

“So when they throw these absolutely stupid procedures to go through that are meaningless, that don’t help me, that I don’t get any good feedback. Nobody’s coming into my clinicals or coming into my classes and watching me going, “Hey, you know, I really like the way you did this, but try doing this other thing.” That would actually help me be better at my job. None of that.” (2:19)
