About the Department of Art at California State University, Fullerton

The Visual Arts complex at California State University, Fullerton (CSUF) is situated within 70,000 square feet of studios, classrooms, computer and design labs, and galleries. CSUF offers more options for art degrees than most private or public schools in Southern California, and its new media and exhibition arts programs are among the strongest on the west coast.

Off campus, CSUF partnerships provide students opportunities to work with DreamWorks, Nickelodeon, and UST Global. Recent internships include projects at Disney, NBC Universal, Saatchi & Saatchi, and Sony Pictures; with the studios of Tim Burton, Lita Albuquerque, and Tony DeLap; and at the J. Paul Getty Museum, Museum of Contemporary Art - Los Angeles, and Smithsonian Institution.

CSUF graduates are frequently accepted into the nation's finest graduate programs and have gone on to careers in the robust California arts scene. Many are now employed by the museums, galleries, design firms, and movie studios they first made contact with as students at the university.
