Cal State Fullerton's College of the Arts is distinguished by its fully-accredited Department of Visual Arts, which provides more intensive study options than most private or public schools on the west coast. Fine arts, new media, and design programs provide quality learning to 1,600 undergraduate and graduate students within state of the art studios, classrooms, computer and design labs, and galleries. Off campus, students engage in partnerships and internships with regional studios, artists, and museums.

Award winning, critically acclaimed and internationally recognized individuals make up the core of the Visual Art faculty. Their work can be found in the collections of major museums throughout the world; published in academic journals; and presented at film festivals in the U.S. and abroad.

Across the nation and the world, our alumni are established in careers as fine and applied artists, professors, teachers, department heads, and directors.
