Talk with Luis Hernandez Navarro
Lecture will be in Spanish with English translations
Since September 26, 43 college students from Ayotzinapa Teacher Training College in Iguala, Guerrero, México have gone missing. The rural teachers college has its roots in the Mexican Revolution -- the school's namesake, Raul Isidro Burgos Ayotzinapa has become the international symbol of the helplessness of the Mexican public regarding the everyday violence that has consumed Mexico over the last 15 years.

On Monday November 10, Mexico's most prestigious newspaper La Jornada's opinion editor, Luis Hernandez Navarro will be discussing the current political crisis in Mexico that has sent shock waves through the political establishment.

Fullerton College Campus Theater
Film: "Huicholes: The Last Peyote Guardians"
The film "Huicholes: The Last Peyote Guardians" is on a North American tour and the Orange County screening will take place at Fullerton College on Wednesday, November 19, 2014 at the Campus Theater at 6:00 pm.
Tickets are $7.50, Doors open at 5:30 pm.
The film presents the case of the defense of Wirikuta, sacred territory to the Wixárika (Huichol) people, against the threat of transnational mining exploitation. The event will include an intercultural panel-dialogue with the filmmaker and spiritual leaders featured in the film, as well as a tianguis (marketplace) comprised of local community organizations and Indigenous artisans.
