

2026-2027 FAR Faculty Fellow

Nathalie Carrick, Child and Adolescent Studies

Dr. Nathalie Carrick is a professor in the department of Child and Adolescent Studies. She has worked to support faculty across campus in several roles. For the past eight years, she has served as chair of her department's peer review committee in which she helps lecturer faculty prepare their review files, and also works to improve the evaluation process for reviewers. She recently led the department's efforts to revise the department standards for lecture faculty, and served on the committee to revise the departmental personnel standards. Previously, she served as a Faculty Fellow for Student Creative Activities and Research in which she worked with students, faculty and administrators to support faculty-student research on campus. In all roles, she strives to be efficient, fair, inclusive, and enjoy the work along the way. When not working, she is probably embarrassing her teenage daughters or at her sewing machine making gifts for friends.
